

It isn't BIG to make others feel small

EVERYONE HAS THE RIGHT to work in a safe, respectful environment – free of harassment and bullying.

This right is recognized in law through B.C.'s Human Rights Code, and reinforced in our collective agreements.

We all have a role to play – whether it's holding the employer to account for providing a safe, harassment-free work environment, or treating each other in a respectful and professional way.

If you are experiencing bullying behaviours, talk to your shop steward and consider the steps you can take to resolve the issue.
